

NEW CARS FOR NEW BUSINESS.

L. J. Irwin, of the Henderson
Route, Orders Three Fine
Passenger Cars

FOR WORLD'S FAIR TRAFFIC.

Mr. L. J. Irwin, General Passenger agent, of the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis railroad, has completed arrangements for the immediate purchase of three fine combination cafe and parlor cars to be used on his road during the World's Fair. The cars are similar to those used on Eastern lines and will cost about $25,000 each. It is expected that they will be ready for delivery by February 1, 1904.

The Henderson Route expects to get a large share of the World's Fair business next year and will make all the necessary preparations to handle the passengers and freight that will pass over its line. The present passenger equipment of the road is sufficient for the company's present business but the directors of the company think it best to improve it in order to accommodate the heavy rush towards St. Louis next year. President Attila Cox, it will be remembered, suggested in his annual report that new passenger equipment is needed. He stated that the coaches now in service were in as good condition as could be expected in view of their age and said that the greatest need of the road was new and up-to-date equipment. Since President Cox issued his report the directors of the road have considered his suggestion and, if their wishes are carried out, a dozen new coaches and several baggage cars will be secured. Two more locomotives also are needed, but these were ordered several months ago and are now due to be delivered. The road has a contract with the Pullman company by which it can get all the sleepers needed.

A director of the Henderson Route, referring to the new equipment needed, made the following statement, last

A Woman's Wealth. Paine's Celery Compound

GIVES VIGOR AND STRENGTH TO DEBILITATED AND RUN DOWN WOMEN.

It is maintained by many distinguished writers that the greatness of a nation depends much upon the physical condition of its women. The general conditions which contribute to health and long life, are those which do not imply a rapid and unequal exhaustion of those powers by which life is maintained. While we assert that the women of our land stand peerless for beauty and the virtues that make them lovable, we cannot hide the fact that there are thousands in our midst who, owing to overwork, worry, household cares, and an unequal exhaustion of life power, have become weak, nervous, sleepless, and debilitated.

We bring to the attention of all weary, despondent, hopeless, and sickly women earth's great restorer and health builder, Paine's Celery Compound. Thousands of healthy women around us owe their present vigor, activity, and robustness to Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Stephen Smith, St. Paul, Minn., tells how she was snatched from the grave; she says:—

"I had a bad attack of la grippe this spring and was at death's door, and no one ever expected me to recover. I was so weak that as soon as they brought me out of one faint I was in another. I could not take any nourishment, and doctors' medicines did me no good. A friend advised my husband to get me a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, which he did, but had no faith in it. The second day after taking the Compound, I began to get real hungry and took an interest in things. I had everything that money and loving care could supply, and with that and Paine's Celery Compound, I am now doing my own work, while three months ago I was almost in the grave. I know that I owe my health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound, and shall always recommend it."

week: "We have got to get this equipment if we want to get the World's Fair business out of Louisville, and I think that definite steps will be taken soon."

In all probability another purchase of new rolling stock, besides that of the three combination parlor and cafe cars will be made by the road.

DEDICATION OF NEW CHURCH.

Dr. W. P. Harvey, of the Western Recorder, of Louisville, will dedicate the new Goshen Baptist church at Glendean Sunday, Sept. 27. He will preach the dedicatory sermon and will be assisted in the services by Rev. J. F. Vines, of this city, whose resignation as pastor of the church takes effect October 1. The dedication will take place at the 11 o'clock service and a special musical program will be arranged for the occasion. Dinner will be served on the ground.

People from every section of the county are making preparations to attend the dedication. The debt of the church is only several hundred dollars and it is expected that more than this amount will be raised Sunday. The people of Glendean are expecting to have a large crowd of their friends present and are preparing to give them a royal entertainment. They are noted for their hospitality and good fellowship and a day in their beautiful homes and house of worship is most profitably and enjoyably spent.

The new Goshen Baptist church is one of the handsomest frame churches in the county. It is beautifully located and finely seated. It has been built within the last few months. It was built at a cost of about $3,000 and all but a small part of this amount has been paid. The old church building, which is situated about a mile from Glendean, is one of the oldest in the county and gave rise to the name of the Goshen Association of the Baptist church, which embraces Grayson and Breckenridge counties.

The church now has about 200 members, one half of whom have united with the church since Rev. Vines took charge in June, 1902. The members of the church, appreciating Rev. Vines' aid in building up the institution, want the dedication to take place before he will leave for Chattanooga, Tenn., to take charge of the Central Baptist church of that city, which he will do immediately after the dedication. Rev. and Mrs. Vines, on their way from Glendean to Chattanooga, will stop at Cloverport a few hours to take leave of their many friends here.

Rev. J. T. Lewis, of the Baptist church at Irvington, has received a call from the Goshen Baptist church and it is thought he will accept it.

SEEKING THE

...HIGHEST IDEAL..

By John F. Morton.

The mother gathers the little child into her arms, kisses away the tears that trickle down its cheeks, lays it in the cradle, caresses its feverish forehead and begins her lullaby song. Soon infant beauty slumbers in undisturbed repose.

The mother now begins to think of the responsibility which rests upon her. She realizes that she is the guardian angel over that pure soul.

Finally the child awakes to lisp its mother's words.

Day after day goes by and he is seen out in the yard making railroads or building mills down on the brooklet. The child is grasping some of the ideas of life. He knows right from wrong, and becomes responsible for his own conduct. Thus he bathes in the sunlight, or lingers in the silver spray and listens to the music of the brooklet as it leaps from rock to rock down the hillside.

Finally a siren voice calls him out into the world of action.

He would love to be a mechanic, merchant or lawyer. He sees his name written in letters of gold as a statesman.

An air castle is erected, around which he begins as his life's own arch. Brick by brick he places on each other until it is ready for the dome; but in erecting this the whole structure falls to the ground.

Failure has overtaken him. Another course is pursued, and yet another. He accomplishes his aim; yet there is something lacking.

Nothing will suffice the longing of the soul. Everything is vanity. Falling into a state of despondency he cries, "Which way shall I fly? Which way I fly is death! I, myself, am death! Alas, relent!"

Suddenly a light comes down. It focuses on the cross; thence along a strait road which leads upwards. With that light comes these words: "Soul, if thou wouldst live thou must die."

Is this true admonition? Yes, it is the light that guided the dazzled shepherds over the Bethlehem plains. It is the light that shone down upon the manger when the morning stars sang together; and all the heavenly host shouted in its brightness.

It leads along the narrow way which crosses the roads of sin. It crosses many of the highways that tend toward this world's happiness.

Often clouds gather to hide its rays; but soon float by, only to return again. Still the pilgrim plods his weary journey. Oft times he is heard speaking with trembling voice:

Bare me on, O tired limbs,
Bare me on to my happy home.
Across the valleys, o'er the hills
May I not forever roam.

The sun with its light is setting
And before me lies many a mile.
With weariness should I be fretting?
No, let this day be closed with a smile.

He is content with whatever surroundings he may have, as long as he is following the sacred light.

This ideal reflects from many directions. Like the sun, when it hides itself behind the western horizon it still paints the dark eastern clouds with golden tints of resplendent beauty. It is seen from the snow flake to the dewdrop. From the spring flower to the autumn leaf.

It reflects upon the placid river as it bends around the hill and pictures the woodland a bouquet upon its bosom.

It beams from the countenance of true friendship. It is felt in the atmosphere of good association. We hear its music from the song of the bird to the cultured human voice. All these, together with the adverse things of life, lift the soul of the real man towards the highest ideal.

His strongest battles are fought in the stillness of quiet meditation. That courageous soul braves the bluffs and clamor of worldly enticements.

The ghosts that stalk about at midnight hours keep their worthless vigil. He feasts upon the sinew of his enemies and weaves their strength into his own muscles. His success is not measured with time; but reaches to the farthest boundry of eternity.

Yet man's ideals are as numerous as the sands upon the seashore. They sift them in the air and they are like the sparks which fly up in a dark night but soon go out. They are slung to the skies and seem as multitudinous as the stars but prove to be only meteoric showers that fall before they can be reached.

There is only one true ideal.

It is fixed by the eternal hand of God. Beyond the farthest star it is fixed; and will not move though the earth be shaken to pieces and the sun jolted from its socket.

Thus we are launched out on life's domain. Early we sail the calm waters of the bay; but the lead around the cape off which streams the signal light, at intervals, warns

We sat at the table—the alderman, the doctor and I. The subject of dieting was brought up in conversation. "No man," said the alderman, "can tell me what I ought to eat without knowing my habits of life, my temperament and all—is that not so, doctor?" "Perfectly right," said he, "what suits your stomach may not fit mine, and yet nine men out of ten are presumptuous enough to tell you what you ought to eat." "Yes," said I, "they don't appreciate that there is just as great a difference between two men's stomachs as there is between their brains. Overwork some men's stomachs and they will easily respond to the task, just as some men's brains can take care of endless details, but the majority will break down with the overload." "Indigestion," said the doctor, "is not a disease but an admonition—it is the red light that signifies—danger. It is the language of the stomach to prepare for serious trouble if allowed to persist. Bitters and alcoholic medicines are poor means for stimulating the stomach to perform a larger share of work than it ought. The effect on the stomach is like the spur to the weary horse—it weakens him and shortens his life. A rational treatment," continued the doctor, "is moderate eating of wholesome foods, and only those which the person likes. Occasionally, say once a week, a dinner pill should be taken which should be entirely of vegetable ingredients—like Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—that will not purge, but act gently on the liver, stomach and bowels. To my mind the main dependence for curing permanently the indigestion which has become chronic—the 'heart-burn,' the sour eructations, the worst cases of dyspepsia—is that alterative extract made from medicinal herbs that Doctor Pierce calls his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' for it contains no alcohol to overstimulate the stomach, but it simply goes to work in the right way—correcting the liver, purifying the blood and assimilating the food so that the stomach takes up its labors with activity and refreshed powers. It fills the arteries with the pure, rich, red blood of health. It tears down, and carries off old, inert and half-dead tissues and replaces them by new. It builds firm, healthy flesh. It makes the muscles strong and elastic and steadies and tones the nerves. It cures debility and weakness of every description."

W. Walter McGloshen, of Reinbeck, Iowa, writes: "I took only four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets,' and these remedies did me a world of good. I am thankful for your kind advice and praise the medicines highly. Will recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to all my friends as the best medicines ever made for the troubles for which they are recommended. There is nothing equal to them for stomach troubles."

C. P. Spencer, of Plano, Okla., wrote: "I can hardly express my thanks for the benefit I have received from taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' They worked like a charm in my case. Am in better health now than for some time, and will not fail to recommend your medicines to my suffering friends. I hope you will receive my thanks for the good your medicine has done me."

us to stir far from the rocky coast line.

The storm begins to rise and the mists of eventide close about. Only the doleful ringing of fogbells can be heard. All night long our craft rolls and creaks. The clouds hang low over the blue water and make darkness dense. Yet in the roar of the tempest can be heard the sweet strains: "Cheer up, ye saints, for day comes at last to the hearts that wait 'till the night is past". Over the eastern hills loving streaks lance the severing clouds. The mists are clearing away; and the troubled waters are sinking to rest on the bosom of life's sea. The statue of love's liberty holds out her lights and welcomes the Christian sailors into a peaceful haven.

Then help us to Thy abode, that we may bask in Thy effulgence, O guiding star of hope, O beacon light of love.

Old mother Nature has never been improved upon—sometimes she needs a little assistance over hard places though.

But when we assist her, the nearer we keep to her own methods and processes the better.

Sometimes the digestive organs need help; we have indigestion. Pepsin is what nature has selected to do the work of digestion in the stomach; hence, the best help to digestion is pepsin. The pleasantest and most beneficial way to take pepsin is with pure port wine, as combined in Walthers' Peptonized Port, and sold by A R Fisher in that form. The port itself is a valuable tonic.

Taylor, Finley and Powers.

The cases of Former Gov. W. S. Taylor, ex-Secretary of State Charles Finley, Capt. John L. Powers, a brother of Caleb Powers, and others charged with complicity in the Goebel murder conspiracy cases, were called in the Franklin Circuit Court last week and continued. There will be no further investigation at present in the Goebel case, and no indictments by the grand jury for the term now on.

A Purgative Pleasure.

If you ever took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness, or constipation you know what a purgative pleasure is. These pleasant little pills cleanse the liver and rid the system of all bile without producing unpleasant effects. They do not gripe, sicken or weaken but give tone and strength to the tissues and organs involved. W. H. Howell, of Houston, Tex., says: "No better Pills can be used than Little Early Risers for constipation, sick headache, etc. Sold by All Druggists."
